Director's Corner

Christmas is quickly upon us. We can definitely enjoy the fun "Santa" part of Christmas, but what do we do to make sure our children understand the real meaning of our celebrations? I'm sure we read books about the birth of Jesus, display a nativity in our home, and attend mass. Could we do more? How can we teach our children about Jesus' love for others and helping those less fortunate? It's as simple as modeling this behavior for you children. At this young age, children are natural observers, so show them what it looks like to give. Here are some easy ideas you can try this holiday season:

- Collect items for a food drive.
- Have the children choose toys they no longer want or play with to bring to a women's shelter or other donation site.
- Talk to your children about showing kindness and how giving to others can bring joy to yourself.

Whatever you choose to do, remember the reason, and may all of God's blessings come to you this Christmas!
